COLORADO: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED

IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: Appreciation is expressed to Lillian Larson, formerly adviser at Grand Junction High School, Professor James Stratton of Oklahoma State University, Vance L. Wise of Denver Public Schools, D. W. Chatoupla of College High School in Greeley, Professors Tell Mabee and A. Gayle Waldrop at one time on the faculty of the University of Colorado. The compiler is a graduate of Fort Collins High School and a former graduate student of University of Colorado.

Introduction

Colorado's first high school newspaper was founded eighty years ago in Colorado Springs. It was the eight-page Lever published by William J. Palmer High School.

Henry M. Stanley was featured on the first page of the second edition printed on March 30, 1887. Rhetorical exercises and the examination schedule made page two of the two-column publication with columns a little under three inches wide.

Published monthly, The Lever was produced by a staff consisting of Frank C. Wilder, editor; Maggie Russell, local editor; Hattie C. Bumstead, personal editor; Charles H. Bliss, advertising manager; Oliver Shoup, advertising agent; Ada Mansfield, mailing clerk. The subscription rate was fifty cents.

The March issue stressed the progress made in the schools during the past three or four years. It listed the members of the board of education and faculty, devoting about a page to personals.

Three and a half pages were filled with local advertising without timely copy or sales appeal. Merchants, dentists, photographers, contractors, bakers, hotels, realtors, and livery stables bought space in the publication.

The first high school yearbook in Colorado also was The Lever, for it consisted of the bound copies of the newspaper with thirty some pages, according to Kenneth L. Hinshaw, principal.

COLORADO

Published in 1895, The North Side High School Chronicle probably was the first high school newspaper in Denver. Published monthly, it sold for twenty-five cents a year--paid in advance. It listed Thomas E. Rust as editor, Jessie Lee as assistant editor, and Gail W. Holmes as manager.

The first page of the first issue featured a poem by Elizabeth D. McArthur entitled "My Favorite City." About one-third as much space was given to reporting the formation on September 28, 1895, of an association of Denver high schools to schedule football games. "A series of practice games was played, all of which resulted in favor of the N.S.H.S."

If other high school publications were founded in Colorado before 1900, school historians have failed to report them to Quill and Scroll Studies which is making a nation-wide study of early high school publications.

High school journalism courses with credit probably were not taught in Colorado until after World War I. A course was taught in 1920 at Central, Pueblo; 1922, Palmer, Colorado Springs; 1927, Centennial, Pueblo; 1929, Central, Greeley; 1932, Fowler; 1935, Manual, Denver. Others probably were founded during this era.

In 1939 there were forty-five mimeographed school newspapers with a total circulation of more than 10,000, Jean Hunt reported in a thesis. Unfortunately she did not identify the newspapers or the schools in which they were published, but none was more than seven years old.

In 1961 journalism courses were taught in only 112 of the 292 high schools. More than three times as many Colorado boys and girls were studying Latin--a dead language few will ever use--than were studying journalism--that is, the mass media all of them will use!

High school newspapers and magazines were founded or in existence in Colorado at the times indicated here. (N refers to Newspaper; M to Magazine)

DELAWARE: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED

IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances these and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: State Archivist Leon de Valinger, Jr., in 1965 made this statement:

"To the best of our knowledge there is no compiled history of secondary school journalism in Delaware; it is therefore impossible for us to determine the first such publication in any category. It is possible that we have one or two items illustrative of later nineteenth century school writing.

"Friends School in Wilmington, compiled by Charles W. Bush and others, published at Wilmington in 1948, pages 24-26, gives an account of the Whittier Literary Society, organized in March 1884 by students of "the Academic classes." One of the Society's immediate undertakings was the preparation of a school publication, named The Whittier Miscellany after much controversy. It is our understanding that the magazine has been continuously issued since that time.

"The third item is a handbook, entitled Curriculum and Rules of Georgetown Public Schools, a 12-page pamphlet measuring 4 1/4 inches x 6 inches, printed by "Sussex Journal" Print, Georgetown, Delaware in 1895. There were twelve grades, with English Literature, History, Latin, Algebra, Physics and Geometry as the offering in the final year. The pamphlet also contains the school calendar and three pages of regulations.

"We have not been able to document the age of The Whisp, of Wilmington High School. It was started, however, substantially earlier than 1921, for a member of our staff was a subscriber in September 1919 when the magazine was already a school tradition. It had, moreover, a predecessor the exact nature of which has not been fully determined. The capsule placed in the cornerstone of the new High School building in December, 1884 contained, among other memorabilia, The Indicator, edited by H. W. McIntire and Wm. H. Heald, "published monthly by the Indicator Publishing Company at the Boys' High School." It is the issue of July 1880, numbered volume I, No. 4. It is a four-page folder, printed, 8 1/4 inches by 11 7/8 inches, priced at ten cents for six months by subscription, or two cents per separate copy. It contains two student commencement essays, an editorial, an account of the High School Commencement and closing exercises of the lower schools, a humorous treatment of the subject "Co-education," and a few advertisements."

Caroline Philips, secretary of Friends School, provided this information in 1966:

"Friends School in Wilmington, Delaware, started a literary magazine in 1883, known as THE WHITTIER MISCELLANY. The first printed copy was published in April 1895, twelve years after its first issue. The magazine was published three times a year and the final issue in June was a Yearbook format until the 1940's, when a separate Yearbook was published by each senior class.

"In the spring of 1953, THE WHITTIER MISCELLANY became a newspaper and has been published monthly every school year since then, reserving most of one page as a literary section."

Robert V. Martin, Principal of Wilmington High School in 1966, made this statement:

"We have in our files copies of #2 and #5 Volume I of "The High School Index, an Amateur Paper, conducted by the Boys and Girls of the Wilmington High School" dated February and May, 1874, respectively. I assume that Volume I, No. I was published in December of 1873 as a comment by the editor in the No. 2 issue states, "In the hurry to get our first issue out before the holidays we . . . ." It would be safe to state that the first issue was published at the latest in January of 1874."

In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisers and these sources.

Note: Dr. Regis L. Boyle made this comment in 1965 on student journalism in the District of Columbia.

"No one has written a history of student publications in Washington. The oldest high school in the District, Old Business High School, closed its doors and was turned into what was then Division 2 (Division I being White, Division 2 being Negro). The next oldest was Central High School, which closed its doors in 1950 when it was turned over to Division 2 and the records transferred to storage, untended by anyone.

"The magazine, the Central High School Review, was begun in 1886. The newspaper at McKinley Technical High School, the Tech News, was begun in 1901, according to the school historian. The Central High School Yearbook was begun in 1906.

"Journalism was first taught at Central High School in 1902. This is the first date we could find for journalism's introduction into the curriculum of the District Schools."

Quill and Scroll is indebted to Dr. Boyle for her cooperation. She has a long record of distinguished service to student journalism in the District of Columbia and Maryland.

GEORGIA: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED

IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student peblications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian sccieties, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: The Georgia Scholastic Press Association, founded in 1928, cooperated in this study, but its own files apparently contained limited data on when specific publications were founded.

Miss Gigi Parker, 1966 adviser at Savannah High School, reported thus:

"The first issue of The Blue and White, the present newspaper of Savannah High School, was published in December, 1909. The predecessor of The Blue and White was The Savannah High School Monthly which, according to Haygood S. Bowden in his book Two Hundred Years of Education, first appeared in 1905 and was the first paper published by high school students in the state of Georgia. The earliest issue of The Savannah High School Monthly in the files of the Savannah High School library is the Souvenier Issue (V. I, No. 6), a blue covered booklet published for the graduating class of June, 1906. The editor was Washington Faulk, Jr. He was encouraged by Mr. H. F. Train, principal, and Mr. Otis Ashmore and Miss Florence Olmstead, who contributed to the Souvenier Issue. Although actual copies of a paper earlier than The Savannah High Schoo. Monthly have not yet been found, there are evidences that a newspaper existed bofore it. For example, the exchange column in the Volume I, Number 6 edition of The Savannah High School Monthly states, "The S.H.S. Monthly was recognized this year for the first time in several years."

"Another instance is found in an editorial in the Volume I, Number I edition of The Blue and White: "For some time the students of the Savannah High School have published a paper. At first the paper was weekly, but under the conditions which are placed upon a school paper this was soon found to be impractical. The little weekly sheet was discontinued, and a monthly magazine of more substantial form and matter was issued. The paper was published in this form for some time. . . ."

ILLINOIS: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED

IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: Studies by Nixon, Coe, Huff, Jardine, Pierik and Campbell were the sources of many dates. Gene Gilmore, director of the Illinois State High School Press Association, gave substantial cooperation. A list was published in the February 1967 Illinois High School Journalist. Corrections and additions appear in this list. The compiler was director of the Illinois State High School Press Association from 1939 to 1941. He established the planning council. Among advisers cooperating were Lillian Jossem of Belleville, Kay Keefe of Lyons Township.

Note: The first high school press institute was founded by Professor William R. Slaughter at Northwestern in 1932.

Note: From Volume I, Number 1, February 20, 1911, The Parker Weekly:

"Editorial -- This issue of the Parker Weekly is an experiment. Whether it will become an institution of the school or not is left for the students to decide. There may be some doubt as to whether a weekly newspaper--for that would be the nature of this publication--is desirable in this little school or not, but we believe that with the right sort of cooperation of the students, this periodical, small as it is, may be made extremely interesting, not only to the students, but to the Alumni and others who are interested in the school. It is our idea to issue this paper every Monday morning, and to make it a student publication in every sense of the word. Not only will the matter that is to go into the paper be written by the students, but the mechanical (an interesting) part of the work, consisting of composition and presswork, will also be done by students. There are many boys in the school who know enough about printing to be able to do this work in good shape, and their services along this line is absolutely essential to the success of the paper.

"It is to be strictly a newspaper, giving accounts of the interesting events of the past week and announcing the various activities of the present week.

ILLINOIS - Newspapers and Magazines

"By printing the news from week to week, while it is fresh, we do not think it will detract from the Recorder, as at present issued, but on the other hand will allow even more space for good literary articles.

"Let us know by word or action what you think of issuing the Parker Weekly."

Note: In 1966 Dorrit Keirn wrote:

"As early as 1861 Wilmington may have had a school paper--Vol. 3, No. 10, was published on March 31, 1863. "Knowledge is power" is the slogan appearing on the first page of the paper named the Wilmington School Journal. A copy was found with other papers used as insulation in an old house that was being torn down.

Poetry and miscellaneous compositions are, for the most part, all that the paper carries. Page 3 of the four-page journal, however, features a paraphrase on the first three chapters of the First Book of Chronicles. Topics for the compositions range from "The War" to"Music," to "Honor to Parents." One is on the hard times and the need for wearing patched dresses to school. The writer was glad at least that her patches were "like" her dress.

"Humor is largely a play upon proper names: "Why will some of our scholars never grow old until they are married? Because they are 'Young.'" Of the two small ads on page 2, one concerns a "Mrs. Dr. Coates" who had just returned from Europe and had been persuaded to accept a few piano pupils. "The Dr. would also state that the Glee Club is about to be reorganized."

"Wilmington cannot claim to have had a school paper for all the years since--it was in the fall of 1952 that two teachers sponsored a group of interested junior and senior students in starting a paper. First named the "Wil-Lo-Ette," it later became "The Scribbler." Both were mimeographed. Later the news was given to the publishers of the local weekly who gave the school enough pull sheets for distribution to the students.

Note: From Quill and Scroll:

"Tad Lincoln, son of Abraham Lincoln, edited the first school newspaper in Chicago ... according to Cji Daily News, Vol. 1, No. 1, of the Brown School Budget was edited by 13-year-old Tad and classmate in 1866. 4-pp is on display, Lincoln Hall, Chicago Historical Society ... Christmas or holiday edition of Brown School Budget...."

Note: In 1966 Mrs. Mary Youngdahl wrote:

"The Line O'Type, the Moline High School newspaper, began in 1917 and so we are now publishing our 49th year with next year being our golden anniversary. We plan a number of feature stories about it continuing through the year.

"The newspaper began as a four page 7 by 9 issue that came out rather regularly about once a month. It has been published every year since that time. It has won scores of All Americans, Medalist nearly every year for the last 15 years or more and International honor ratings from Quill and Scroll besides getting the coveted Pacemaker award once.

"We have bound copies of the paper ever since it was started and if you have some specific questions concerning it, I would be glad to look them up for you. I became adviser in the fall of 1958."

Note: Betty House in 1966 wrote:

"Bloom's long-hoped-for school newspaper made its debut on March 5, 1924, under the sponsorship of Miss Ida Way and the editorship of Miss Ellen Caskey.

"Miss Way had come to Bloom in the fall of 1923 from Knox college. She started a newswriting class in the fall and took over the sponsorship of the Bloom annual at the same time.

"The paper originally was a 4-page bi-weekly, but under the editorship of Pio Uliassi in 1941, financial and other conditions permitted several 6-page editions, and the paper has retained this status save for an occasional 8-page or 4-page Pony special edition.

"Following Miss Way, Miss Ellen Caskey assumed the duties of adviser for a year and a half; then Mr. Kenneth Hindley took the helm for a semester. Miss Mary Elizabeth House, present adviser, assumed her duties in 1937.

"The Broadcaster celebrated the "new" Bloom's 10th (new building) anniversary with a special edition on February 18, 1944. The paper observed its Silver anniversary on March 12, 1949."

Note: In 1965 Joanna Zander wrote:

"The "E" Weekly was first produced in September, 1922. It had several predecessors. There seem to have been sporadic attempts as early as the early '90's to do something in the line of a news bulletin. At first they seem to have been posted on bulletin boards. In 1899 there was a Purple and White, sold at 5¢ a copy. Briefly in 1902, there was a school news column in a community paper called The Chicago Eye. In 1912, for one month there was a bulletin board newspaper called The Howl. By school vote this was discontinued and a literary magazine called the "E" was started. In February, 1920, a weekly newspaper called The Reporter was begun. After two years, it was felt that both a newspaper and a magazine were too great a financial burden. Both were dropped, and The "E" Weekly came into existence. It lasted until I ceased functioning as adviser. I think that was in 1941.

Note: In 1967 Wayne Brasler wrote:

"We heard of your search for early school newspapers. A check of the Lab Schools' archives reveals a U-High Weekly from 1903 to 1906, a U-High Daily (sometimes

It wasn't) from 1907 to 1922 and a U-High Midway from 1922 on. U-High Midway also was the name on an earlier literary magazine here. The elementary school had the reporter, actually a literary magazine, from 1910-21 it appears.

INDIANA: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: In 1965 Mary Benedict, one of Indiana's outstanding advisers, gathered these data:

"The earliest recorded newspaper within an Indianapolis Public School was at Shortridge High School in 1880. Called The Junior, the publication measured 4 and 3/8 by 5 and 7/8 inches and was published faithfully as a weekly, appearing 40 times that first year. It sold for slightly more than one cent a copy and contained news, letters from students, poetry, and continued stories.

"In 1898 The Junior became The Comet, resembled a magazine, and boasted in one issue that it exchanged with 130 schools throughout the nation. It specifically mentioned that within the state it exchanged papers with schools in Muncie, Portland, Kokomo, and Richmond so all of those schools must have had papers as early as 1898.

"The first high school in Indiana was in New Albany so you might double check with that school system to see whether they had a publication before the 1880 date.

"In one half of the ten Indianapolis schools, there is no formal classroom instruction in journalism before staff participation. In those five schools there is a short unit (two weeks) covering journalism in certain English courses. One school includes it in English IV (last half of the sophomore year), two schools give some attention to journalism in accelerated English courses at the III (first half of sophomore year) and V (first half of junior year) levels. One school has no journalism instruction while the other designates one section of English V as that which will include a journalism unit. So even within one given school system the practice varies greatly from one school to another."

Note: Cooperation of Gretchen Kemp, John A. Boyd, Ruth Marie Griggs, and the Indiana High School Press Association is appreciated. At one time the National Duplicated Publication Association had its headquarters at Central Teachers

College, Danville, Indiana. The director was Blanche Wean. The college was closed and the story of this association seems to have been lost.

Note: Albert Mock in his thesis, "A Study of High School Publications," in 1922 identified many Indiana student newspapers, some of which may have been founded before 1921.

Note: Indiana has had many outstanding publication advisers, including Rowena Harvey and Ella Sergenberger.

Note: In 1890 the New Carlisle High School students published news regularly in the New Carlisle Gazette. This procedure was followed in many communities.

Note: By Hattie Byland (1965):

"Volume I, Number I of the Shortridge Daily Echo, Sept. 26, 1898, set a precedent in high school journalism.

"It was the first edition of a high school daily newspaper in the U.S. It is now one of five daily high school newspapers in the U.S.

"The first Echo, which was founded by a senior, Fletcher Barnard Wagner, consisted of one page of news three columns wide. The back was covered by advertisements for carriages, buggies, spring wagons and liquor. The news of the day was an account of two meetings of the Shortridge senate, an institution still in existence, and a sports story about a bicycle and tandem race.

"After 31 issues the paper flopped. The Echo had become a big part in the life of a Shortridger, however, and was reorganized Jan. 16, 1899. The school board granted $250 for the purchase of a press for the high school and since then the paper has been published by the school's print shop.

"To celebrate the Echo's 50th anniversary in January, 1948, an alumni dinner and reception was held at the school.

"The Echo of today is a four-page daily with five staffs. Mrs. William Earl is sponsor. It is financed by subscriptions, which are handled by Echo agents, and advertisements.

"Each fall a special edition of the Echo is devoted to the annual PTA-sponsored Family Frolic. This year a special Shortridge Day Echo was printed for the first time in honor of the Shortridge Day celebration.

"An annual publication, the Christmas Echo, containing poems, essays, and short stories written by Shortridge pupils and organized by a student editor, is published each December. The art department sponsors a contest among the students for the winning cover design for the publication.

"Last year the Echo instituted one of its biggest changes, the addition of a double page of pictures in every Wednesday edition."

IOWA: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED

IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisers and these sources.

Note: Early dates were verified by the compiler on the basis of studies by Huff, Nixon, Coe, and Kropf as well as his 1939 study. Both NSPA and CSPA were helpful. Baird C. McIlroy in his 1939 thesis, "A Survey of Journalism as it is Taught in Iowa High Schools," listed newspapers in existence. No doubt some were founded earlier. Marguerite Blough, a distinguished adviser at East Waterloo, was among those who cooperated.

In 1964 Kenneth Stratton, one of Iowa's great high school teachers, wrote:

"I wish I could give you some information about student publications in the early 20's or before, but I can't. I started teaching in 1922 but didn't get into journalism till 1930. For a long time I kept up a series of scrapbooks, consisting mainly of clippings from Scholastic Editor, School Press Review and Quill and Scroll. However, there is nothing of historical interest in them, for I was interested only in helps for advisers and students."

William J. Peterson, Superintendent of the State Historical Society of Iowa, in 1965 wrote:

"Why in the world don't High Schools (if they find a State Historical Society is willing to house their Annuals and their Newspapers and bind and preserve them in permanent form) place them in their State Historical Society Library?

I have spoken to individual Superintendents and Principals and I think at the present time we are getting three or four Iowa High School Annuals, but no newspapers. We are interested in getting a representative collection of these because we feel that sometime good articles could be written on various phases of high school activity and that ultimately a well-illustrated book could be gotten out on this subject which would have real significance and meaning. Unfortunately, we get no response."

IOWA

In March, 1954, the State Historical Society of Iowa published several detailed articles on basketball. Similar reports on student journalism could be published if cooperative efforts resulted in a collection of high school publications.

Unfortunately in the consolidation of schools, some files of early publications may have been lost or destroyed.

High school newspapers and magazines were founded or in existence in Iowa at the times indicated here. (N refers to Newspaper; M to Magazine)

KANSAS: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED

IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: The first high school journalism course in Kansas may have been taught in 1912 when Miss Cora Colbee taught journalism at Salina High School. A course was taught at Oberlin in 1916, at Topeka in 1918, and at Altamont in 1920. Miss Carmie Wolfe taught the course at Topeka.

In 1961 journalism was taught in 140 of the state's 621 public high schools. Of the 156,705 students 381 enrolled in one-semester courses and 2,235 in one-year courses. The state department of education was unable to provide significant data on high school journalism activities, curricular or co-curricular.

The first high school yearbook published in Kansas was probably the Annual Catalog published by the LaBette County Community High School in 1893. It included "the faculty, pictures of different classes, articles about different departments with pictures and the school's course of study," according to Curtis D. Sides, principal.

Ola Floyd Nixon in a master's thesis accepted in 1922 and G. Gordon Grandberg in a master's thesis accepted a decade later referred to various yearbooks then in existence, but neither referred to the date of founding. So far no comprehensive study of the history of yearbooks in Kansas high schools has been made.

The Kansas State Historical Society in Topeka in 1967 reported that it has "75,000 volumes and original newspapers," but that it did not have the personnel to make a search for student publications. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation of Professors Elinee Beth and Warren Agee.

This statement appears in Sixty-Two Years of History in the Topeka High School, 1870-1932:

"As early as the Lyceum was organized [1872], a school paper was edited and read before the society by different members of the school. Usually they were entitled with such satirical headings as "The High School Advance," "High School Helmet," "High School Tribune," "High School Times," "High School Advocate," "Lyceum Lantern," and "Washburn Star." These papers were written solely for their entertainment and contained very little if any historical value.

"The first attempt at a real publication was made in the term 1893-94. The High School Budget Co. issued "The High School Budget." It contained four pages, 10 x 12 inches and was greatly appreciated by the students. The paper was not strictly a high school enterprise as the grade students were interested as well as High School students. Only eight numbers of this little bi-monthly were issued--from October, 1893, to February, 1894.

"No further effort was made in journalistic lines by students until September, 1896. On September 18, "The High School World" made its initial appearance. It was published by the Topeka High School News Co. and edited by a staff chosen from the upper classes. For the first year it contained four pages, 13 x 18 inches in size and resembled a country newspaper in appearance. The next year the magazine form was adopted. The book was nearly square, 8 x 10 inches, and contained eight pages.

"No World was issued in the fall of 1898, but was resumed with renewed vigor in February of 1899. Six more pages were added, making 14 in all. The size was changed to 6 x 9, the regular book, which it has been ever since. From 1896 to 1899 the senior class edited one issue of the World for their class annual. Above taken from Forty Years of History in Topeka High School."

John Harry, Journalism instructor of Cherokee County Community School, reports:

"In 1912 the first newspaper was started here at Columbus High School. It was called the Question Mark because they were not sure it would last. In 1923 the high school became the Cherokee County Community High School and the newspaper became the CCCHS Record. In 1955 the high school became Cherokee County Rural High School and the newspaper became the CCRHS Record."

High school newspapers and magazines were founded or in existence in Kansas at the times indicated here. (N refers to Newspaper; M to Magazine)

KENTUCKY: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED

IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: The English Teacher in Kentucky by Robert Newman Guise recognizes journalism as an incidental or accidental by-product of English teaching. Published in 1964, it is a study of the academic and professional preparation of public high school teachers of English in Kentucky. It makes no significant recommendations for improving requirements for journalism teachers and publication advisers.

Of 2,146 English teachers, only three listed journalism as the area of the first major and two as the area of the second major. In any event, in Kentucky as in most states, leaders in English education accept no responsibility for the teaching of communication in journalism. This is the attitude of NCTE and many national leaders in English education.

Note: In 1967 the compiler and Robert Murphy completed a study entitled "Journalism Activities in Kentucky Public and Non-Public High Schools."

High school newspapers and magazines were founded or in existence in Kentucky at the times indicated here. (N refers to Newspaper; M to Magazine)

Note: It is probable that an in-state study would provide more data. It is possible that Miss Ava Chadbourne's History of Education in Maine may list names of academies which may have produced student publications. A search in libraries, museums, and historical and antiquarian sources may bring to light more information.

MASSACHUSETTS: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED

IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: This information was obtained in the 1960s by DeWitt Wise:

"The first student publication was undoubtedly "Exetonia," a small weekly founded in 1871 and printed somewhere in Maine. It faltered after a few issues.

"The Exonian first appeared in 1878, and has since that time called itself "The Oldest Preparatory School Paper in America." Except for a few early issues suppressed by the faculty, the paper has appeared continuously since its founding, as a weekly until 1888, and twice weekly since that time with a few occasional exceptions during war years. Our library has complete bound copies.

"The Pean first appeared in 1880. As an early yearbook, it frequently incurred faculty wrath and was not published in 1882, 1883, 1889, 1890, and 1896. This, too, had some illustrious student contributions. In the volume of 1888, the drawings are by Booth Tarkington.

"The Phillips Exeter Monthly was the next publication to be started. From May, 1886, to June, 1933, this literary publication appeared except for a period in 1896-97, and a curious ten-year lapse from 1898 to 1908. In 1933 the name was changed to The Review; in 1955 to The Pendulum, the name under which it now appears four or five times a year.

"Students published special programs for Exeter-Andover athletic events. Our library has the earliest one for track, dated 1892; for football, dated 1896, and for baseball, 1899.

"The E Book was presumably started in 1898, a handbook for new students. Our library starts with volume 7-9, 1904-1906, and thus the origin can be estimated.

"Illustrated calendars by the student photographic group were first issued in 1904 and have followed at sporadic intervals.

MASSACHUSETTS

"There have been a variety of one-shot publications. Exeter's Best is a good example. This was conceived entirely by the student editors who underwrote the printing bill and turned a modest profit.

"Retort, 1960 (subtitled "Why Senator John F. Kennedy Should Not be Elected President") is a similar one-shot publication.

"The New Liberator is a current, mimeographed publication of the student Peace Group.

"The most ambitious student project in recent years is Northeast '63, a supplement to other student publications with a circulation of about 18,000, prepared by a student group here.

"Davis Library has excellent samples of these and other publications. They represent the results of industry and enterprise nourished by a tolerant and cooperative faculty."

Note: In 1965 the Boston Public Library reported:

"The Boston Public Library has early issues of the following school papers, but no information as to whether these were the first publications of their type in this state:

"The E. H. S. Record. Vol. I, No. I, October 1885. Boston, English High School, 1885. (Eight-page monthly paper).
"The object of the Record is to offer to its subscribers an opportunity to present articles of interest to all, and to afford a means of publishing items that directly concern the school."

"The Satchel. Vol. I, N . I, January I, 1866. Boston, Public Latin School, 1866. (Four-page semi-monthly paper).
"It is our intention to devote it to the incidents and interests of schoolboy life, and to fill it so far as possible with original contributions from the boys."

"The Students' Manual. Vol. I, No. 2, April 16, 1851. Boston, Public Latin School, 1851. (Four-page weekly paper).
"Devoted to literature, education, and the rights of the student."

Note: In 1965, the headmaster of Boston Latin School, founded in 1635, wrote:

"In addition to THE STUDENT'S MANUAL of 1851, the students of the Boston Latin School have published several other issues throughout the years, all of which may be found at the Boston Public Library. These other issues are:

The Literary Journal	May 9, 1829	The Juvenile Gazette	1848
The Rising Sun	1845	The Streamlet	1848
The Gleaner	1845	The Student's Manual	1851
The Bedford St. Budget	1846-8	The Satchel	1866"
The Rivulet	1846-8

MASSACHUSETTS

Note: In 1966 the American Antiquarian Society in Worcester reported:

"Thirty years ago some national educational organization was giving an annual prize for high school and academy publications, and the copies sent in were transferred to us after the judging. We came to a decision that these would be more useful in a school of education, so we broke off our collection with 1876, and sent a whole carload of the later ones to Columbia University Teachers College. Whether or not they have kept up the collection I do not know. No doubt we do have quite a few such publications before 1876, but unfortunately they are not segregated from the official publications of the schools, so the only way to get at them would be to go through the shelves pamphlet by pamphlet."

MICHIGAN: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED

IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword:

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: Substantial assistance in gathering these data was provided by Ms. Mattie Crump, John Field, and the Michigan Interscholastic Press Association.

In 1939 the Michigan Council of Journalism Advisers reported that there were 201 newspapers, 15 magazines, 107 yearbooks, and 46 school pages in local newspapers. Of the newspapers, 95 were bi-weekly. One hundred eighteen schools had journalism courses. Data on the founding of yearbooks has been difficult to obtain. Theses by Granberg, Nixon, and Campbell were useful sources.

High school newspapers and magazines were founded or in existence in Michigan at the times indicated here. (N refers to Newspaper; M to Magazine)

MINNESOTA: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED

IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: The cooperation of Professor J. C. Sim and the Minnesota High School Press Association was helpful in preparing this list. The early theses of Nixon and Granberg were helpful too.

High school newspapers and magazines were founded or in existence in Minnesota at the times indicated here. (N refers to Newspaper; M to Magazine)

MONTANA: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED

IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: Data on early high school publications in Montana were gathered with the cooperation of the Montana Interscholastic Editorial Association and the Montana Historical Society. Miss Mary K. Dempsey of the historical society was especially helpful.

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: Quill and Scroll Studies is indebted to Gunnar Horn, Belle Farman, and to the Nebraska High School Press Association for their cooperation. There seems to be little if any evidence to indicate that a systematic effort has been made to gather data on the origins of student publications, especially yearbooks, in Nebraska. This collection may be somewhat useful to those in the state who can make thorough inquiries.

NEVADA: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations, In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisers and these sources.

Note: These limited data have been gathered by Quill and Scroll Studies, but no state-wide attempt has been made to obtain complete data--a project that properly might be undertaken in Nevada.

In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: An in-state study of all secondary schools is needed as well as inquiries through historical and antiquarian groups, libraries, and museums. Schools no longer in existence may have published publications before 1900.

NEW JERSEY: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED

IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student juarnalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: The assistance of Dr. Frederic Merwin of the School of Journalism at Rutgers University is noted. Investigative studies of Professor Joseph Carter at Temple University were helpful. As founder of the Temple Press Tournament the compiler had some background for this inquiry. Additions and corrections will be welcomed.

High school newspapers and magazines were founded or in existence in New Jersey at the times indicated here. (N refers to Newspaper; M to Magazine)

NEW MEXICO: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED

IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certain student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisers and these sources.

Note: So far as can be determined, no in-state attempt has been made to gather data systematically on origins of high school publications.

High school newspapers and magazines were founded or in existence in New Mexico at the times indicated here. (N refers to Newspaper; M to Magazine)

NEW YORK: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisers and these sources.

Note: Columbia Scholastic Press Association, Empire State School Press Association, and these sources were especially helpful:

Queens Borough Public Library, 89-11 Merrick Blvd., Jamaica, N.Y. 11432
East Hampton Free Library, 159 Main Street, East Hampton, N.Y.
Long Island Historical Society, 128 Pierpoint St., Brooklyn, N.Y. 11201
Brooklyn Collegiate Institute, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11201

The compiler while on the faculty of the Syracuse University School of Journalism, 1945-1947, helped to plan ESSPA conferences. Since 1959 he has been on the faculty of the School Press Institute of which he is co-founder.

High school newspapers and magazines were founded or in existence in New York at the times indicated here. (N refers to Newspaper; M to Magazine)

NORTH CAROLINA HIGH SCHOOL PUBLICATIONS SINCE 1900
By Laurence R. Campbell
Director, Quill and Scroll Studies - 1974

In 1971 Quill and Scroll Studies published a brief article entitled "School Publications in North Carolina before 1900." To the list should be added "The Guidon," Carolina Military Institute, Maxton.

Commenting on publications since 1900 Professor Walter Spearman in 1965 wrote:

> I edited the Central High School yearbook in Charlotte in 1925 (Snips and Cuts) and worked on the high school paper (The Rambler) and they had both been in existence long before I was in high school. I am quite sure the larger cities of the state also had high school newspapers and yearbooks before then.

These lists are published in the hope that those who may have significant data on this subject will make additions and corrections.

For example, the program of the 23rd Annual North Carolina Scholastic Press Institute listed a number of participating schools for which we have no dates of the origin of their student publications.

NORTH DAKOTA: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED

IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the ccoperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: Quill and Scroll Studies welcomes additional information as well as corrections. Apprently no systematic effort has been made to gather these data for North Dakota. Such studies should be undertaken in the state as a matter of interest and pride.

HIGH SCHOOL PUBLICATIONS IN SOUTH DAKOTA
By Laurence R. Campbell
Director, Quill and Scroll Studies - 1974

The High School Newspaper, a 31-page booklet by Paul W. Kieser and Mildred E. Yule, in 1922 reported that "there are approximately 35 high schools in the state which are now publishing separate papers containing school news."

"A healthy 94 per cent of the schools in the state published a newspaper, a yearbook, or both," D. J. Cline reported for the year 1971-72. There were 210 high schools in operation that year in South Dakota.

Published in 1903, the Bear Butte Breezes of Sturgis may have been the first newspaper. Within a decade newspapers or magazines were founded at Lead, Mitchell, Washington High School in Sioux Falls, and Watertown.

The Class Book was published in 1899 at Washington High School, Sioux Falls. The Phenom at Brookings appeared in 1909, The Interlakes at Madison in 1913, The Patee at Hot Springs in 1914. Brookings changed its yearbook name from the Phenom to the Bomb in 1918, to the Pheasant in 1926, to the Bobcat in 1930.

Other yearbooks were founded at the times indicated:

UTAH: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED

IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: Studies of Utah student journalism appear to be limited. Most of the data herein were reported by Ms. Mary Joan Larsen in her thesis: "A Survey of Journalism in Utah Public Secondary Schools" in the 1960's.

VIRGINIA: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED

Note: In 1969 only 94 high schools offered a one year introductory journalism course. Enrollment was 1996. Journalism II was offered in 12 schools. Enrollment was 208. Source: State Board of Education.

In 1967 the Alderman Library University of Virginia reported:

"In spite of an extensive search, we have had little luck in determining the founding dates of the early publications. In the first place, we seem not to have copies of the publications in our collections. Second, what should be valuable sources of information are actually of no real assistance with your question. For example, Morris S. Tischler's A Study of Scholastic Organizations Offering Aid to Publications in the Public White Secondary Schools of Virginia (M.A. thesis, University of Virginia, 1949) includes a section on the history of secondary school publications; but Tischler does not name any early Virginia publications. Similarly, Alvin C. Cooper's A Study of Student Publications in the White Accredited Secondary Public Schools in Virginia (M.S. thesis, 1931) and Donald Miller's A History of the High Schools of Virginia (M.A. thesis, 1928) contain nothing pertinent. Of printed works such books as George C. Wells's Student Publications (New York: A. S. Barnes, 1930) have comments on the history of publications but tend to deal in generalities."

WASHINGTON: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED

IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: The cooperation of Warren M. Hazzard, Homer Post, and Howard M. Brier was invaluable in this inquiry. Unfortunately the University of Washington School of Communications discontinued the Pacific Slope School Press which Howard Brier had developed into an outstanding association.

Note: The compiler attended Quincy High School for two years. During his second year he edited "Qu Qu", a handwritten magazine. There were 20 students in the school, 4 in the sophomore class. He took his first journalism course at the University of Washington. In 1950 he spoke at the PSSP conference. In 1960 there were 4,795 students in high school journalism courses.

High school newspapers and magazines were founded or in existence in Washington at the times indicated here. (N refers to Newspaper; M to Magazine)

WEST VIRGINIA: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: Quintus Wilson in 1965 and 1966 was very helpful in this inquiry. Rudolph Norton in a 1934 thesis listed newspapers covered in his study.

Note: In 1965 Mrs. James E. Casto of Marshall University, Huntington, wrote:

"The United High School Press of West Virginia, itself, was founded in February 1927 by Professor W. Page Pitt. Annual meetings of the state organization were held every year through 1942 and then were resumed on an annual basis bollowing World War II. The members of UHSP are representatives of West Virginia high school newspaper staffs.

"The companion organization, United High School Yearbook Association of West Virginia, however was not formed until 1952. But the West Virginia Journalism Teachers (WVJTA) was organized by the Marshall University Journalism Department in February 1931. Members are advisers of high school yearbooks and newspapers.

"According to Mrs. Ruth Sutherland, Journalism Teacher, Ceredo-Kenova High School, Ceredo, W. Va., her high school has copies of yearbooks published in 1914-15. Mrs. Jack Nichols of Huntington High School, Huntington, W. Va. has the first copy of the school newspaper, The Tatler which is dated November 1909 and was published as a news magazine. Huntington High also has a combined yearbook and newspaper published in 1914.

"East Bank High School's newspaper, The Pioneer Post dates back to 1913 under the name The Pioneer Chatterer. The yearbook for East Bank also goes back to 1913 and is entitled The Kanawhan. Mrs. Shirley M. Gilkerson is the present yearbook adviser."

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisors and these sources.

Note: Substantial cooperation from R. L. Tottingham, executive secretary of the Wisconsin Journalism Teacher-Adviser Council, accounts for the scope of this inquiry. In preliminary stages in 1965 he wrote:

"The Increscent, Beloit Memorial High School's student newspaper is indeed the oldest in the state in continuous publication. It was founded in 1898. I am sorry I do not have information on the earliest yearbook, although I know that Beloit's is a qualifier here, certainly."

Significant sources also were studies by Mixon, Granberg, and Campbell. Lists of critical service reports in "Scholastic Editor" and "Quill and Scroll" were helpful. Many principals, advisers, and student editors cooperated. Approximately 3,360 students were enrolled in Wisconsin high school journalism courses in 1968.

High school newspapers and magazines were founded or in existence in Wisconsin at the times indicated here. (N refers to Newspaper; M to Magazine)

WYOMING: DATES EARLY STUDENT PUBLICATIONS WERE FOUNDED

IN SECONDARY SCHOOLS

Compiled by Dr. Laurence R. Campbell, Director
Quill and Scroll Studies, 1975

Foreword

Bicentennial celebrations may stimulate interest in the origins and heritage of student publications in American secondary schools. Certainly student journalists may take pride in their early newspapers, magazines, and yearbooks. Indeed investigative reporting may provide the basis for timely articles.

Sources of data are back files in the school, alumni, libraries, museums, historical and antiquarian societies, state and national school press organizations. In some instances theses and dissertations have provided information, particularly those before World War II. Quill and Scroll Studies appreciates the cooperation from advisers and these sources.

Note: The cooperation of Professor Wallace Beggs of the University in 1965 is appreciated. He is a former student of this compiler.

Principal J. K. Corbett in 1966, Laramie,Wyoming, wrote:

"Laramie High School has had publications since 1910. The publication was called "The Dinosaur" from 1910 to 1919. It probably received this name because of the discovery of a large fossil bed north of Laramie which aroused some nationwide interest. The paper was printed on slick paper at intermittent intervals and the final edition each year was an annual and was called by various names such as the "Memo" in 1917 and the "Junior or Senior Annual" in other years. It was printed by the Boomerang, local newspaper founded by the famous American humorist, Bill Nye in 1881.

"In 1924 an official school newspaper was established under the name "Larahi." This name was changed to the "Plainsman Herald" in 1929 and in 1931 the Plainsman head, closely resembling that of the showman, Buffalo Bill Cody was adopted as the symbol for the school and its publications. The name is still used for a school publication.

In 1924 the annual was published under the name "The Plainsman" and that continues to be the official summary of the high school year.

High school newspapers and magazines were founded or in existence in Wyoming at the times indicated here. (N refers to Newspaper; M to Magazine)
